Excerpt: .illuminants, taking ordinary coal gas as the standard of comparison, is as follows: Comparative cost of lighting by various means for an equal degree of illumination. Coal gas (ordinary burner) at 2/9 per 1,000 cu. ft. l-00 Do. (Welsbach Incandescent).-47 Petroleum.-62 Acetylene (Carbide at 20 per ton).-85 Electricity, at 4d. per B.T.U 1-68 In the estimate of the cost in the Welsbach system the amount is for gas only; if interest upon cost of special fittings and renewal of mantles be included, the comparative cost would probably be nearer-75. Acetylene therefore compares very favourably with coal gas, whether under ordinary or the more favourable incandescent conditions, whereas it is only about half the cost of electricity at the low rate of 4d. per B.T.U. The relative photometric value or light-power of an illuminant is determined either by comparison with the standard candle or with another illuminant of similar nature and of known power. The British standard is the sperm candle and is the amount of light emitted by such medium when consumed at the rate of about 120 grains per hour. The apparatus usually employed for computing the illuminating value of artificial light is known as the Photometer, and consists of a disc of white paper having a grease spot in the centre. It was the invention of the eminent Runsen, and although it has been varied in form and construction, in principle it remains the same. When the degree of illumination on each...
